THE PROSPEROUS FARMER.

'I have fed like a farmer; I shall grow fat as a porpoise," wrote Dean

The farmer can afford to feed well, he can afford to dress well, to house himself comfortably, even luxuriously, and to enjoy such of the good things of Agriculture Wilson tells us something about the farmer in his annual report to congress. And accustomed as Amerieans are to tremendous figures in political standpoint was an indication give a dinner this evening in complimatters pertaining to their government, the array set forth by Secretary Wilson is staggering.

Delitical standpoint was an indication give a dinner this evening in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. William Bartling, who leave shortly for the coast.

Six billion, four hundred and fifteen millions of dollars. Put it this way, $6,415,000,000. That's the wealth product of the farms of the United States in 1906. Secretary Wilson says it is the shire, Rhode Island and, lately, New highest amount ever attained in this York, New Jersey and Connecticut, in country, and he added, quite unnecessarily, "or in any other country." Corn, the Republicans to carry Texas or Mishay, wheat and rice established new records. All the crops were first class, and prices were high.

The hen got into the game in grea shape. Secretary Wilson says she laid twenty billion eggs. Do you know what that means? It means practically ocratic at every presidential election 250 eggs for every man, woman and for the next fifty years. child in the United States. If you didn't get your share it wasn't the fault of the industrious hen. She certainly did her share. She added very materially to the prosperity of the farmer. anyway. So, bless you, did everything else the honest agriculturist handled.

with the striking statement that 'should there be no relapse from his present position as a wealth producer, three years hence the farmer will find that the farming element, about 35 per amount of wealth within ten years amount of wealth within ten years equal to one-half of the entire national wealth produced in three centuries.

We are sure nobody begrudges the farmer the notable increase that has come to his bank account. Goodness knows he struggled along through good many lean years. Seasons there have been in plenty when only in Kanwe been in plenty when only in Kansas and Nebraska could he raise the wind on his place, and in some parts of the country he was barely able to raise Cain. These conditions have changed

The money merchants have begun to look to the farmer for funds with which to carry on their operations. Here's hoping he exacts plenty of interest.
